HEARTLAND NATIVE PLANT SUMMIT

Cultivating Resilient Landscapes

October 5 and 6, 2016

Lauritzen Gardens, Omaha, Nebraska

Periodic drought is a part of life in America's Heartland, putting a strain on the plantings that enhance our residential, commercial and community landscapes. The Heartland Native Plant Summit will explore innovative ways native plants can be used to craft landscapes that are beautiful, sustainable, and naturally resilient to drought.

— Summit Highlights —

- Presentations by experts in climatology, native plant ecology, and sustainable landscape practices
- Sessions on native plant horticulture (plant selection, propagation, maintenance practices, etc.)
- Sessions on utilizing native plants in the landscape (planning, design, innovative applications, etc.)
- Keynote address by Michael Forsberg, renowned Great Plains conservation photographer
- Opportunities to network with an exciting cross-section of parties committed to water conservation
- Time to explore Lauritzen Gardens on your own or on a guided tour
- Tours of local native plant nurseries, natural areas, and real-world landscaping projects

— Who Should Attend ? —

- Nursery, landscape management, and other green industry professionals
- Public garden professionals
- Landscape architects
- Real estate developers and property managers
- Urban and land planning professionals
- Conservation agencies and organizations
- Students
- Native plant enthusiasts
